“Jurying shows is one of the best parts of my life as a dealer. You never know what marvelous distinct voices you will be honored to see. The best part of this experience was finding those artists who have their own unapologetic voice and are more than happy to share it. Of most importance to me, is the unabashed voice that is not interested in producing just another pretty picture. I want to be moved, annoyed, confronted, engaged and taken on a tour of another’s thoughts and ideas of the world. I want to be forced to even question my own beliefs and prejudices. I want to be provoked into learning a new way of seeing, especially when it’s something I don’t know anything about or agree with. I most of all want to see an idea — a personal idea. On another note, when I am looking at work I try to consider the process of how the artist got to this piece. What I am trying to say is that process is what happens over time, as the artist realizes that with every new piece they are building a body of work, and within that body of work and that building of it, there will be sign posts they will leave behind as touchstones which will inform the next piece and the next piece. All the while the work is becoming stronger.” —JACK FISCHER
